

Cancer Care Closer to Home

A partnership that brought treatment closer to patients, whānau and their community

The chemotherapy room at Taupō Hospital

In the past, patients from the Taupō area had to travel to Rotorua to receive cancer treatment. This meant long journeys at a time when patients and their whānau were already facing the physical and emotional demands of treatment.

Through a partnership between the Taupō Hospital & Health Society and Lakes Health, a dedicated chemotherapy room was created at Taupō Hospital. The Society helped furnish the room with comfortable, fit-for-purpose chairs and equipment to support both patients and the nursing team.

“Bringing cancer treatment closer to home means patients can receive care within their own community, surrounded by familiar people and places, without the added burden of travelling to Rotorua.”

The local service has made treatment more accessible and comfortable while reducing travel for Taupō patients and their whānau. It is a practical example of what can be achieved when health services and community organisations work together around the needs of local people.

This partnership continues to benefit our community by supporting compassionate, locally delivered cancer care at Taupō Hospital.
